Hollywood has its glitz and glam, but did you know Washington, D.C., gets its fair share of movie-making magic? Yes, the capital stars in many films from “Forrest Gump” to the upcoming “Wonder Woman 1984,” which filmed in the streets of Georgetown and downtown this summer. The District also channels Tinseltown with film fests like AFI Docs and this month’s D.C. Shorts film festival. Read all about the city’s Hollywood connection on page 12. This month also kicks off my favorite season, and with it, even more exciting things to see and do in the city. Just turn the page to find out all about the latest and the greatest.

Ways to Connect

Sip Local

Virginia's wine country has plenty of top-notch vineyards, like Boxwood (pictured) for sampling the area's viticultural bounty.

Dig In

September brings a change in season and the city's restaurants respond with menus highlighting Autumn.

Take a Class

The kids aren't the only ones going back to school. Drop-in courses at D.C. museums expand the mind for all.

Go Natural

Head to green oases like the U.S. Arboretum or Hillwood Museum & Gardens to take in local fall colors.

Get Fit

Run, walk or roll along multiple paths that wind in, out and all around this picturesque capital city.

“Turn Me Loose”

Before Richard Pryor, there was Dick Gregory, an activist who took the fight for civil rights from the streets to the mic. In this Arena Stage debut, playwright Gretchen Law takes a no-holds-barred approach to telling Gregory’s story, from his beginnings performing for black audiences to his rise as the first black comedian to confront bigotry head on before white audiences, often risking his own safety in the process. New-to-you finds for your wardrobe

SHOPAHOLICS IN D.C. have fertile ground for uncovering retail gold. In a city of lawyers and lobbyists, plenty of luxury boutiques stock fresh-from-the-runway looks. But bargain hunters mine plenty of gems, too. In-the-know stylists head to Krista Johnson's well-edited Ella Rue in Georgetown for luxury goods at deep discounts. Brands like Chanel, Louis Vuitton and Gucci regularly make appearances. At subterranean style den Junction, trendsetting guys and gals dig up cool duds, jewelry and accessories (cat-eye sunglasses!) from the 1930s to today. Second-generation consignment shop owner, Toni Henderson stocks her bright Old Town shop, Mint Condition, with day-to-evening Diane von Furstenberg dresses, Proenza Schouler "it" bags and other pristine must-haves. Deal-seekers hit sunny Dupont Circle mainstay Secondi, where high-end items from Burberry, Theory and Chloe get cheaper by the day.

Accessories to the sublime: What's old is new again

Vintage Mirage
Yes, retro retail can be had online at any number of sites. But few offer that personal touch crucial to second-hand shopping. At Vintage Mirage in Old Town Alexandria, Virginia, owner Elinor Coleman presides over a veritable treasure trove of pristine frocks from yesteryear and offers her wise counsel along the way. Another real gem? Her sparkling collection of baubles and accessories, making old world dress-up feel oh-so new.

FIND THE BEST IN GEORGETOWN, ONE BLOCK AT A TIME

Eat

Naturally, D.C.'s oldest nabe (founded in 1751) has its fair share of history-imbedded restaurants. Among them, Clyde's appeals to families, while 1789 draws date-nighters and dignitaries. Chez Billy Sud plates classic French cuisine in jewel box-like interiors, while "Top Chef" star Spike Mendelsohn's Good Stuff flips crave-worthy burgers served with handspun milkshakes.

- 1789 1226 36th St. NW, 202.965.1789
- Chez Billy Sud 1035 31st St. NW, 202.965.2606

Shop

With stores lining the brick sidewalks, Georgetown is a shopper's paradise. Sneaker heads looking for the latest kicks jog over to Major, while fashionistas browse the runway at Relish. Music fans shouldn't miss a stop at Hill & Dale, which carries a well-curated selection of new tunes on vinyl.

- Hill & Dale Records 1054 31st St. NW, 202.333.5012
- Major 1426 Wisconsin Ave. NW, 202.625.6732
- Relish 3312 Cady's Alley NW, 202.333.5343

(Clockwise from top) Ri Ra; Major; Dumbarton Oaks; Good Stuff Eatery

Drink

Like its dining counterpart, Chez Billy Sud, Bar a Vin channels Old World France for sipping wine. Ri Ra literally brings authentic Irish ambiance thanks to architectural pieces shipped from County Wicklow. The Tombs hums with a collegiate vibe and a nod to the movies (it was the inspiration for the bar in "St. Elmo's Fire").

- Bar a Vin 1035 31st St. NW, 202.965.2606
- Ri Ra 3125 M St. NW, 202.751.2111
- The Tombs 1226 36th St. NW, 202.337.6668

Play

This buzzing zone also appeals to sightseers with plenty of intriguing places. Dumbarton Oaks and the Francis Scott Key Memorial offer lovely grounds for strolling or contemplating. At Washington Harbour, sailors and kayakers ply the Potomac. When night falls, Gypsy Sally's draws crowds for musical performances in an intimate club setting.

- Dumbarton Oaks 1703 32nd St. NW, 202.339.6400
- Francis Scott Key Memorial 34th & M St. NW
- Gypsy Sally's 3401 K St. NW, 202.333.7700

Gettin' Reel

Washington meets Hollywood with film sets and festivals.

By Jennifer Barger

THIS SUMMER, Wonder Woman stalked around Georgetown. Well, that was Marvel franchise star Gal Gadot, filming “Wonder Woman 1984” at spots around the city rewound to the Reagan era thanks to vintage cars and costumed extras.

From the early 20th-century to today, D.C.’s dazzling white monuments, vintage neighborhoods and history have made it a popular setting for filmmakers. Highlights from the reels? The 1912 silent short “Filial Love” and “The Exorcist,” the 1971 horror movie, where a priest topples to his demon-induced demise on steep outdoor stairs in Georgetown. Countless thrillers and political intrigues have at least used background shots, if not whole scenes, of the capital city, too. “I feel like Washington becomes more of a character than a place,” says local Jen Betkey. “I’ve seen the White House get destroyed so many times on film, I almost can’t believe it when I see it standing.”

Many of the top locations center around the White House (“Independence Day,” “Jackie”) or the monument-stuffed National Mall (“Captain America: The Winter Soldier,” “Forrest Gump”). But high costs (and high security) mean many interiors and some exteriors happen in less-busy stand-ins like Baltimore, Philly and even Cleveland.

For cinephiles, the District gets two thumbs up as a place to see films, too. “D.C. is a surprisingly diverse movie town in terms of both festivals and what’s showing,” says Kristen Page-Kirby, a local film critic at Washington Post Express newspaper. “You’ve got the Goliath, American Film Institute’s AFI DOCS, and smaller events focusing on environmental films, Hong Kong cinema and more.”

September 6-16, the DC Shorts festival screens 125 works (all with run times of 40 minutes or less) at downtown’s E Street Cinema and Capitol Hill’s snug Miracle Theatre. Offerings include “Laboratory Conditions,” a 16-minute horror flick about an illegal experiment and a missing body starring Marisa Tomei and Minnie Driver, and “Negative Space,” a five-minute animated short about packing for business trips. Films are shown in 90- to 100-minute blocks. “It gets people to see a wide variety of works,” says Joe Bilancio, the festival’s director of programming. “Even if an audience member doesn’t like everything in the showcase, that range starts discussions.”

Venues also skew diverse. Besides first-run theaters (E Street rules for arty fare; the AMC Loew’s Georgetown 14 boasts plush, reclining seats and a bar), historic movie palaces and quirkier spots are also popular. The 1936 Uptown Theater boasts a curved, 70-foot-long, 40-foot-high screen and Art Deco architecture. “There’s really nothing like the AFI Silver,” says Page-Kirby of Silver Spring’s historic-yet-state-of-the-art spot. “It’s so technically perfect, and it’s one of the few places in the U.S. that can still show actual film in 70 mm.”

Screenings take place at local museums, too, with classic fare at the Library of Congress’ Mary Pickford Theater and high culture at the National Gallery of Art, both free. At the Smithsonian, the Air and Space Museum in D.C. and in Chantilly, Virginia, show current releases on huge IMAX screens, while the American History museum offers a more intimate space.

And then there’s Suns Cinema, a theater-bar mash-up in D.C.’s funky Mt. Pleasant. In a 20th-century rowhouse, the second-floor theater holds mismatched bar stools and folding chairs for 1970s horror flicks and contemporary Korean action hits.

No wonder locals are constantly holed up at the movies. “I go to 50 or more a year,” says Betkey. “There’s just too much to see.”

Food | THE GUIDE

Martin's Tavern

Since 1933, politicians, Supreme Court justices, spies and media stars have imbued this Georgetown institution with a wealth of stories. Among them? Then-Senator John F. Kennedy's 1953 proposal to Jacqueline Bouvier in Booth 3. The spot claims the distinction of having served every U.S. President since Harry S. Truman, before they took the oath of office. On Sept. 12, the tavern marks its 85th anniversary as a go-to for movers and shakers, and maybe even a president in the making. 1264

WHERE IN WASHINGTON, D.C.

THE FIX

We're addicted to craft cocktails.

Barmini

■ This month, we're drinking in D.C.'s top-shelf craft cocktails. Here, a few of our favorite mixologists weigh in on where they like to go and what they like to sip.

For more inventive craft cocktails in the city, visit wheretraveler.com

Barmini

The space is white and bright. This alone sets a completely different mood. The staff is welcoming and knowledgeable. They make sure your experience is nothing close to ordinary and everything close to extraordinary. Order: Veruka Salt. It most represents this bar. It's perfectly balanced but with flavors that you've never had together. —Carlie Steiner, co-owner/ beverage director, Himitsu

Maxwell Park

I just want to go here and drink any number of the delicious wines that Brent Kroll and his team pick. He is so clever in the way he puts together such a compelling and comprehensive menu every month. Order: Colle dei Bardellini "U Monte" Vermentino and Vino Lauria Fontane Bianchi. I was over the moon about his selection of salty, marine-influenced wines this summer. —JP Fetherston, beverage director, Columbia Room

Room 11

I've been frequenting Room 11 for as long as I can remember, and I am always impressed by their cocktail menu. The late-night crowd is always full of familiar faces as it happens to be an industry haunt. The atmosphere is cozy, and there are always good tunes on the radio. Order: A play on a gimlet made with gin, Suze, lime and prosecco. —Megan Barnes, beverage director, Espita Mezcaleria
