NEWS TO TRAVEL BY

Gracious Living

It may sound strange that an Upper East Side hotel would bill itself as a fashionable country resort, "free from the noise and dust of public roads." But, in 1826, that is exactly how the Mount Vernon Hotel described itself. At that time, all the action in the city was below 14th Street, so a hotel on E. 61st Street was no doubt as suburban as ... well, suburbia. Visitors could take a stagecoach or steamboat to the hotel, which, later on, became home to three generations of a New York family. Today, you can visit the estate for a glimpse into the early years of genteel city life.

Originally built as a stone carriage house in 1799, the building was converted into the Mount Vernon Hotel in 1826. It became an economic asset to the city, employing servants, cooks, waiters, coachmen, livery stablemen and steamboat workers. Here, quests would dine,

In a city where everything seems to be in your face, it might be surprising to discover the sheer volume of concealed venues thriving under the surface. Dozens of bars and restaurants beckon visitors to make their way down secret staircases, through unmarked doors and behind hidden walls. It might require a little detective work, but trust us, it's worth it.

BEAUTY & ESSEX

In the mood for glamour? You'll find it at Beauty & Essex, a luxurious restaurant cloaked by a Lower East Side pawnshop hawking antique guitars and costume jewelry. Settle into a booth in the chandeliercrowned dining room for a smattering of small plates, chili-salted shishito peppers and wild mushroom ravioli. Or, ascend the Gatsby-esque staircase to sip colorful, flavorful cocktails, like the Beauty Elixir (Hendrick's gin, cucumber, strawberry and sparkling rosé), among a well-heeled crowd upstairs. P.S. Ladies: There's free sparkling wine in the restroom. 146 Essex St., 212.614.0146, beautyandessex.com

DINNERTABLE

Most people go to the Garret East to drink, but those with an appetite saunter past the bar and seek out the doorbell marked "Press for food." That brings you to Dinnertable, a 20-seat eatery that's as cozy as your favorite aunt's living room. Because seating is extremely limited, prepare to make new friends at the communal table or nestle into one of the quirky two-seaters, complete with mismatched chairs and topped with pop-culture-inspired prayer candles (think: Dolly Parton in prayer, engraved on a candle). From ham-hock terrine to charred mackerel to roots salad, there's a little something for everyone on the menu, but we bet Dinnertable's $17 hot dog beats what you'll find at the street carts. 206 Ave. A, dinnertable.nyc, no phone

LA ESQUINA BRASSERIE

Usually, there's not much to see in the basements of New York City restaurants, but the one under The Corner Deli on the Lower East Side looks like a film set, with wrought-iron gates, weathered brick and stone walls and art made from Mexican tiles. It's the home of La Esquina Brasserie, a Mexican restaurant and tequila bar that draws models, Wall Streeters and celebs. To check out this exclusive spot, you've got to make a reservation, then make your way through unmarked doors and the bustling kitchen. The experience is so distinctive, vou might still remember it after downing a few margaritas and eating your weight in tacos, ceviche and tostadas. 114 Kenmare St., 646.613.7100, esquinanyc.com

DECOY

Tucked in a former laundromat beneath trendy Chinese restaurant RedFarm is a dungeon devoted to Peking duck. Decoy cooks just two dozen ducks nightly, supplementing the beautiful birds with shots of warm consommé, sliced cucumber, savory pancakes and three homemade sauces. The bar also infuses drinks with duck. both in ingredients and presentation. The Sitting Down for Dinner, for example, includes Peking duck-fat-washed whiskey and lemon, along with an elegant duck silhouetted in red wine on egg white foam. 529 1/2 Hudson St., 212.691.9700. decoynyc.com

FREEMANS

The idea behind Freemans was to create a rugged clandestine co-Ionial American tavern. Indeed, a job well done. A powder-blue door hidden in plain sight down an alley leads the way to hearty American fare. The tavern is cozy to its core, with warm lighting, taxidermy on the walls and rustic wooden tables. As for food, the hot artichoke dip is the stuff of legend, but you can't go wrong with the lamb shepherd's pie, five-cheese macaroni or roasted chicken breast. Freeman Alley, 212.420.0012, freemans

Master Class

As a frequent traveler, I've found one of the best ways to connect with a foreign culture is through a cooking class. Some include tours of vibrant markets before a hands-on cooking experience in a local grandma's home, while others involve watching famous chefs prepare gourmet meals in high-tech kitchens. The one thing they all have in common: people with a passion for great food and everything their home city has to offer. Here are a few cooking classes to try in New York.—Joni Sweet

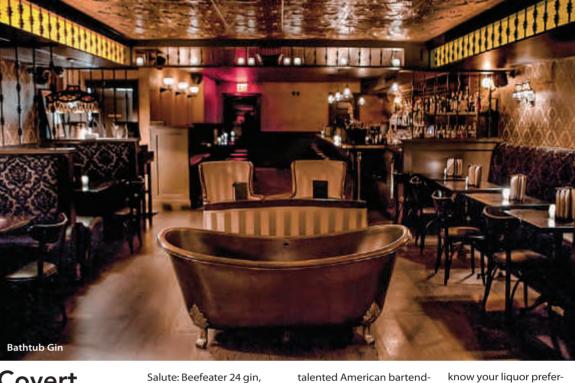

De Gustibus Cooking School: Ever wish you could be a fly on the wall in the kitchens of renowned chefs? De Gustibus Cooking School is about as close as you can get. Celebrated chefs, including Anthony Bourdain, Mario Batali and

Rachael Ray, have lead cooking demonstrations at the school since its founding in 1980. You'll enjoy plenty of wine and a multicourse meal prepared right in front of you. Located in Macy's Herald Square, the center's stateof-the-art Miele kitchen, with large LED screens, ensures you won't miss any of the action. It's a lively environment with ample opportunities to ask the chefs questions and learn their cooking techniques. Classes start at $100. 151 W. 34th St., 212, 239, 1652, degustibusnyc.com

Milk Bar: Want to learn to bake like a two-time James Beard award winner? Milk Bar, the cult-followed bakery founded by "Masterchef" judge Christina Tosi, will show you how during two-hour classes at its Williamsburg classroom. You'll learn how to make chocolate malt cakes, crack pie, truffles and other recipes from Tosi's "Momofuku Milk Bar" cookbook in a fun, hands-on environment. Classes are $95.55 Hope St., Williamsburg, Brooklyn, 347.577.9504, milkbarstore.com

Murray's Cheese: Murray's Cheese designs its courses very seriously, employing some of the best sommeliers in NYC. You can choose from an appealing array of classes, including mozzarella making, whiskey cocktails and cheese, wine and cheese 101, and sparkling wine and cheese, all priced between $75 and $125. 254 Bleecker St., 888.692.4339, murrays cheese.com.

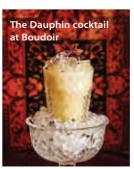

Covert Cocktails

Prohibition made America a dry country overnight. But New Yorkers wouldn't let the law get in the way of quenching their thirst: During the 1920s, more than 30,000 speakeasies popped up around the city to profit from black-market booze.

You can get a taste of this thrilling time at Bathtub Gin, a Chelsea saloon tucked behind a door in the Stone Street Coffee Company café. The bar's namesake copper bathtub, displayed in the center of the lounge, pays tribute to the poor-quality alcohol made in (you guessed it) bathtubs during Prohibition. The alcohol has since improved, evident in Bathtub Gin's gin-focused creations (like the 24-Gun Salute: Beefeater 24 gin, elderflower liqueur, saffron syrup, orange-apple bitters and grapefruit oil). 132 Ninth Ave., 646.559.1671, bathtub ginnyc.com

How do you know if Lantern's Keep, the Iroquois Hotel's Parisian cocktail lounge, is open? No need to Google it, just check if the lantern outside the historic hotel is lit. This elegant bar draws inspiration from the Temperance Movement not with virgin drinks, but with the careful techniques ers refined when they fled to alcohol-friendly Europe at the time. The cocktails are beautiful in their simplicity, usually comprised of just a few ingredients mixed to perfection. With dim lighting, a working fireplace, velvet seats and walls flanked by reproductions of Degas' ballerinas, it's a romantic spot for lingering over some of the city's best cocktails. 49 W. 44th St., 212.453.4287, iroquoisny.com

Don't bother looking for a sign or menu at Attaboy—you won't find either. The clandestine cocktail den hides behind an unassuming door on Eldridge Street, marked with the letters "AB." Knock gently and hope that one of the few seats at this popular spot is open. Drinks are a negotiation between you and the bartender: Let him know your liquor preference and whether you like something light and fruity or smoky and strong, and he will craft you a personalized drink. 134 Eldridge St., no phone or website

Drink like a queen at Le Boudoir, a Marie Antoinette-themed bar. Le Boudoir takes its French Revolutionary muse seriously—its bathrooms replicate the queen's own powder room, a bronze bust of la reine tops a marble bar, red velvet booths make quests feel like royalty and opulent French-inspired cocktails are served in gorgeous goblets. To get in, you'll need to slip behind a door disguised as a bookshelf at popular French eatery Chez Moi and make your way down the stairs. 135 Atlantic Ave., Brooklyn Heights, Brooklyn, 347.227.8337, boudoirbk.com thrillingly sensuous work," which can be seen at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, a few blocks from Erminia. In our mind, this romantic pairing is a nobrainer. Erminia, 250 E. 83rd St., 212.879.4284; The Metropolitan Museum of Art, 1000 Fifth Ave., 212,535,7710

Getting Around
New York by

MTA New York City Transit subways connect four of the city's five boroughs. Blue and white buses run in all five boroughs. Subways run 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Bus or subway questions? Check out www.mta.info.

Bus and Subway

ABOUT SUBWAYS

NYC Transit's subway system operates 24 lines designated by either a route number or letter. Serving 469 stations along 660.75 miles of track, approximately 6,400 air-conditioned subway cars will take you to almost anywhere in the city faster than a taxi and at a fraction of the cost.

Subways run every 2-to-5 minutes during rush hours, 10-to-15 minutes during the day and about every 20 minutes between midnight and 5 am.

Signs above the platform edge tell you which trains stop there and the direction of travel. Signs on the front of the train identify the route. Subway maps are hung at stations; you can also find one in every subway car.

Subway station entrances display the routes that stop there; some entrances only provide service in one direction (for example, uptown only or downtown only), so be sure you check before you pay.

Station booth agents can answer questions and sell MetroCard, NYC Transit's electronic farecard. Subway stations also have MetroCard vending machines. They accept credit/debit cards or cash.

ABOUT BUSES

Approximately 5,900 air-conditioned buses provide reliable service on over 300 routes to almost anywhere in the city. Bus stops are located about every two blocks on street corners and are marked by a sign pole with a bus emblem and route number. While some buses run 24 hours a day, most operate between 5 am and 2 am. Bus schedules and route maps are posted on most bus stops. All buses are equipped with wheelchair accessible lifts. Check the sign on the front of the bus. If you're not sure it's the bus you want, ask the bus operator.

ABOUT FARES

The base subway and local bus fare is $2.75 per ride, payable by MetroCard. Buses also accept exact change (but no dollar bills or pennies).

METROCARI

You can buy MetroCards at any subway station booth. MetroCards are also available at MetroCard vending machines, which are found in many subway stations and at select neighborhood stores. Look for the MetroCard sign in store windows or visit www.mta.info/metrocard for a store near you.

There are two kinds of MetroCards: 1) Unlimited Ride—$31 for seven consecutive days and $116.50 for 30 consecutive days. 2) Pay-Per-Ride—The bonus for purchasing multiple rides is 11 percent.
