NEWS TO TRAVEL BY

Essential Philadelphia

This town is best known for its history and endearing grit. But, it's also a major patron of science and the arts. If you have only limited time to make the most of this exciting metropolis, we can show you how to make the most of it. This month, venture a little outside of the city's center, for a refreshing dose of nature.

90 MINUTES IN:

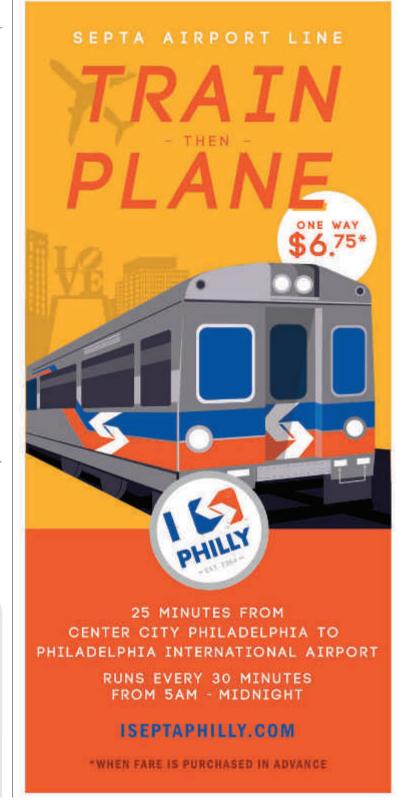

Longwood Gardens

This sprawling space had its beginnings in 1700, when a Quaker named George Peirce purchased 402 acres from city founder William Penn's commissioners. But it wasn't until 1907 that Longwood really got going. Under new owner Pierre du Pont—a devoted gardener—Longwood grew into a showpiece. Visitors today walk among more than 11,000 plant types in impeccably maintained grounds. Meander through the indoor Garden Path, where yellow alders and fuchsia-colored Brazilian plumes flourish. In Peirce's Woods, fall colors fill the 7-acre outdoor oasis. This month, hundreds of chrysanthemums trained into giant orbs and spirals take center stage, while weekend evenings display a spectacular show of lights, music and dancing fountains.

Celebrating the Season's Bounty

ONE FISH, TWO FISH ... SEVEN FISH

For years, Paradiso chef Lynn Rinaldi's grandmother cooked the "Feast of the Seven Fish," the Italian-American Christmas Eve tradition involving a septet of sea creatures that's sacrosanct in South Philly. "It was something all of us looked forward to," Rinaldi says. Naturally, the copper-haired chef brought the family tradition to her restaurant. "It was supposed to be 12 people, but it wound up being 30-something," she remembers. "Meanwhile, all that day, people were coming in to buy gift cards. I got stuck behind the bar for four hours." Fortunately, the meal went off without a hitch, and since then, Paradiso's Christmas Eve special has become legend. This year, $75 gets diners hooked on a menu that starts with baccala montecato and fritto misto, followed by pasta and an entrée (including crab-stuffed skate and seared swordfish with fennel and blood orange). Family-style sides of broccoli rabe and sautéed string beans and potatoes get passed around long tables, while dessert brings trays stacked with cookies recreated from handwritten recipe cards. "It's really special to us," Rinaldi says. "We put our heart into it."—Adam Erace

More Seafood Hot Spots

It's safe to say that Philadelphia is a fish lover's town, any time of the year. If you can't get enough of the ocean's bounty, here are four other great places for reeling in your favorites.

• Anastasi Seafood This Italian Market fixture has been around for so long, many locals don't even call it by the right name. (If you hear people talking about "Anastasia's," this is the joint.) It's a combination fish market and restaurant where fresh catches for sale at the counter wind up on the dinner table. Find shrimp cocktail. Dungeness crab clusters, whole branzini and snapper, grilled octopus and fried flounder. The bar is a great spot for happy hour, when oysters are a "buck-a-shuck," crab cake sliders and glasses of house wine are $4 and draft beers are $5. 1101 S. 9th St., 215,462,0550. anastasiseafood.com

The Olde Bar One of the best restaurants Jose Garces has put out in years lives in the historic, ballyhooed bones of Old Original Bookbinders, a fish house that catered to politicians, big wigs and celebrities in the 1950s. The handsome bar anchors the space in waves of carved mahogany, with nautical caged lights and low pressed-tin ceilings. Think saloon on a luxurious ocean liner. The menu isn't chef-driven, but beautifully manages with updates on classics like snapper soup, fish and chips and lump crab cakes. The East and West Coast oysters are pristine. Add in a deep catalogue of classic and original cocktails black-pepper mules, elaborate swizzles, sours as foamy as the ocean surf and an artisanal Grasshopper for a new generation of drinker—and you have more than enough reasons to visit. 125 Walnut St., 215,253,3777, theoldebar.com

• Oyster House Sam Mink's grandfather founded Sansom Street Oyster House in 1947, but Mink is credited with bringing the classic seafood house back to relevance. Now, the place gleams with miles of white subway tiles, vintage oyster platters decorating the walls and a raw bar where shuckers unhinge 10 types of bivalves, including the hometown favorite. Cape May Salts. Chef Brett Naylor also sends out plenty of cooked dishes from seared scallops with butternut squash and chickpea curry to one of the city's best lobster rolls, complemented by excellent gin cocktails. The restaurant's crowd-pleasing "Dump Dinner" (below) involves a whole Maine lobster, steamed clams and mussels, seasonal vegetables, sausage, potatoes, cabbage slaw and fries for $35 per person. 1516 Sansom St., 215.567.7683, ovsterhousephilly.com

 Jose Pistola's, Sancho Pistola's & Pistola's del Sur This trio of lively cantinas share an executive chef/partner in Adan Trinidad and overlapping menus in which seafood is a particular strength. Trinidad does a knockout job blending traditional dishes from his Mexican heritage with a global hipster aesthetic. Think tacos cradling rock shrimp with pineapple pico de gallo and togarashi-spiced tuna and crab enchiladas in a lake of pasilla cream sauce. Ceviches and tiraditos explode with the vibrant acidity of a fresh-squeezed margarita. Jose Pistola's, 263 S. 15th St., 215.545.4101, josepistolas.com; Sancho Pistola's, 19 W. Girard Ave., 267.324.3530, sanchopistolas.com; Pistola's del Sur, 1934 E. Passyunk Ave.,

Going Nuts for Doughnuts

Philadelphia has a long history with deep-fried dough, dating back to the 17th century and the area's Pennsylvania Dutch settlers, who invented the precursor to the modern doughnut. Now, restaurants all around town offer batches of the baked treat. Whether you like them powdered or glazed, cakey or yeasted, whole or with a hole, there's a doughnut in Philadelphia for you.—A.E.

Manayunk

Situated on the banks of the Schuylkill River northwest of Center City, Manayunk spent much of its history as a working class neighborhood filled with textile mills, soap factories, mom and pop stores and greasy spoon diners. Little changed over the years, and when the manufacturing industries left the city, the neighborhood's attractive row houses and cobblestone streets drew young professionals to the area. Vacant factories were converted into loft apartments and empty storefronts were revived with hip restaurants, bars and upscale boutiques, effectively transforming this once hardscrabble zone into one of the most happening enclaves in the Philly area.

76 Carriage Company

Go back in time and see the city by horse and carriage. Varying from 20 minutes to 30 minutes and an hour, these rides are ideal for tired legs during the day and a little romance in the evening. Day rides are available on a first-come, first-serve basis, while evening tours are by reservation. www.phillytours. com. 500 Chestnut St., 215.923.8516.
